

New Business Development Associate
Trade Show Exhibits • Events • Branded Environments

You have decided that you want to be a sales person! In fact, you already are, you just don't have a long resume of experience to prove it. You are simply looking for the right opportunity to excel and be appreciated, and you have always excelled in challenging fast paced environments.

You are willing to earn your spot on the team by working in a support role in new business development to learn the ropes. Once you've had the opportunity to work closely within the organization, you have your sites on a salary + commission role as a sales person.

As a New Business Development Associate, you are organized, detail oriented and you come to work each day ready to contribute. You work very well on a team, although you can self-start as needed. You understand and embrace the close relationship between sales and marketing, and you know that hard work beats talent when talent doesn't work hard. Achieving is something that drives you in everything you do.

Your starting salary would be $30,000 per year, with a full benefit package approaching $40,000.. Ultimately, as you progress within the sales department, opportunity for a commission based sales position would be the next step.
